

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In an apparatus to increase the service life of bearings in an electric machine, the bearing currents that act on the bearings of the rotor are reduced by the application of a corresponding negative field voltage to the rotor, obtained with the aid of a compensation unit. The reduction of the bearing currents prevents ripple formation in the bearing and increased ageing of the lubricant.